

PaperFree Corporation Increases Initiatives Into Government Sector

Announces Vice President of Government Solutions. New role will have responsibility for managing the company's strategic planning and overall operational focus for the government sector

San Diego, CA (PRWEB) April 22, 2009 -- PaperFree Corporation, the leader in information capture and management solutions for business and government, today announced that Edmund Karls will be heading up their efforts in the government sector as the newly appointed Vice President of Government Solutions. PaperFree Corporation has recently decided to increase its efforts and overall investment in assisting government with the capture and management of information through the use of automation technology.

The first major step forward in increasing their initiative was taken today by choosing a key individual to head up their efforts. "Edmund Karls has already played a key part in our success over the years - most recently as our Vice President of Engineering. In this new role, he will bring even more focus and attention to one of the fastest growing segments of our overall business. Mr. Karls has been dealing first hand with many of our larger government customers for years and understands intimately the unique needs and challenges those customers face each and every day," said James Robinson, President and CEO of PaperFree. "We are excited about what he brings to this position and look forward to utilizing his unique experience and perspective to enhance our position in that market significantly over this next year."

PaperFree Corporation specializes in providing complete end to end document capture and management solutions to business as well as to various government agencies including Federal, State, County, and Local government. As one of EMC's largest and most successful partners in the government sector, they are also recognized as the premier provider of complete end to end tax processing solutions for both State and Federal government. Their most recent award was for a multi-million dollar contract with the State of Louisiana to provide a complete remittance, return, data capture, and imaging capture solution for the Department of Revenue due to be completed by late 2010.

Edmund Karls has held various positions with PaperFree Corporation over the last 8 years, most recently Vice President of Engineering. He is based out of the company's Camp Hill, Pennsylvania offices. He holds a B.S. with Post-Graduate Studies in Industrial Engineering from the University of Illinois. He also holds several accreditations including being CDIA Certified as well as the recipient of the Unisys Eagle and Unisys Distinguished Achievement Award.

"I look forward to this challenge and helping to make PaperFree Corporation the de facto standard for government solutions and services", said Edmund Karls, the newly appointed Vice President of Government Solutions for PaperFree. "I am excited to continue and expand upon the positive momentum we have already built in branding PaperFree Corporation within the government sector".
