

DepositCritical™

Payment (remittance) processing solution with Check 21 capability for both business and government. Achieve faster deposits, reduce banking fees, and increase accuracy!

PaperFree Corporation's DepositCritical is a full-featured payment processing solution that captures check and remittance data from all incoming documents in a transaction including the ability to capture from full page documents that are both structured and unstructured.

The solution also provides the ability to implement Check21 which speeds up deposits and reduces banking fees significantly. Whether you are a healthcare organization, charity, bank, government agency or large corporation, DepositCritical will help streamline your payment processing.

Eliminates the need for multiple capture platforms!

Traditionally, many customers have had to keep payment processing separated from other capture processes within their organization. Check processing has always been viewed as a unique process with many complex requirements and/or restrictions and therefore required the purchase of separate systems and scanning equipment. No more. DepositCritical changes this entirely and now brings you the much desired ability to process all your documents using a single solution through the use of EMC's Dispatcher for InputAccel product suite and advanced scanning hardware like IBM's ImageTrac scanners and OPEX's AS3690 extraction stations.

You can now scan checks, coupons, and full form documents together using the same software and equipment and without the need for significant prep and separation like today's typical operations must endure. Make a change now to the future of payment processing and enter a vast world of unlimited capture possibilities!

How efficient is your payment processing?

Large organizations often receive multiple and mixed-sized transactions (full page invoices, coupons, etc.) with a single check to cover them all. DepositCritical automatically identifies and separates the payment, invoice, coupon, or other accompanying documents and creates a single electronic transaction for easy balancing and reconciliation of your payments. This increases overall workflow efficiency and minimizes possible document loss, accuracy errors and mismatches.

Is your bank charging you a small fortune?

Many customers have been forced at one time or another to consider the use of a lockbox through a bank or other financial institution. At first glance, this seems like an ideal solution. However, for many customers the costs associated quickly add up and the temporary loss of control of accompanying documents can create additional hardship for others within the organization who may desire easier access to documents or additional information captured during processing.

If you are already scanning other documents in-house or are considering an enterprise scanning solution, adding payment processing to the equation is simple through the use of DepositCritical. The solution pays for itself in a matter of months when compared to the costs associated with a lockbox and provides you with the added control and peace of mind that your payments and documents are processed faster and with a much greater degree of accuracy!
